Paper Lunch Bags

We feel these are particularly interesting due to their positive, environmental properties, which should appeal, especially to school children. At present plastic bags, clingfilm and tinfoil are all detrimental to the environment and never decompose. More and more people are also concerned about unquantifiable chemical residues in plastic or clingfilm wrapped sandwiches.

The paper we use is grease resistant to keep food fresh and it is made using natural resources in an environmentally friendly way. Of course, the bag may be recycled, but the paper will decompose naturally too, if disposed of in landfill. With more and more schools seeking to attain a green flag for the environment, we feel there is a good market for our product.

The Paper Lunch Bags are available in all Superquinn & Aldi Stores.
